FIRE PREVENTION WEEK (October 3rd- 9th, 2021)

Fire Prevention Week is an annual opportunity to discuss fire safety across the nation. SRM (ServiceMaster Recovery Management) has extensive experience spanning 50 years in managing and dealing with the aftermath of commercial and educational structural fires. Below are fire safety and prevention tips from SRM (ServiceMaster Recover Management).

Practicing Good Every school is different. You develop school fire safety plans that fit your campus best. It's part of your job as director, and we offer our assistance. These tips can easily be incorporated into any campus fire safety program.

REVIEW PREVENTION POLICIES - The prevention of fire in schools is an ongoing process that should be reviewed regularly.

MAKE SYSTEM FAMILIARITY A REQUIREMENT - Make sure faculty and staff members are familiar with your school's fire safety systems. When everyone has a working knowledge of sprinklers, security lighting and alarms, they're more likely to spot potential system problems.

PRACTICE FIRE DRILLS REGULARLY - No matter how well you teach fire safety in schools, lessons need to be reinforced with practice. Hold regular fire drills once a month so that students become familiar with getting organized for evacuation and following escape routes. These are safety skills they can take home too.

SHAKE UP THE ROUTINE - Several times each semester, hold unscheduled fire drills. Run these unexpected practices at different times of day and under different conditions. This gives you and staff the opportunity to pinpoint any problems with your plans, and it helps children learn to stay calm during an emergency.

EMPOWER YOUR STUDENTS - Let students know how important it is to always practice fire safety. Tell them how much you appreciate them for behaving, helping buddies and following the rules. When they know they're learning skills that will serve them even in college, kids take pride in being a part of school fire safety.
